<https://cahmeawards.secure-platform.com>

The Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Management Education (CAHME) and The Joint Commission recognize that sustainability, a highly educated workforce, and a steadfast commitment to healthcare quality and safety are foundational to advancing the health and well-being of communities. In response to the growing need for leadership at the intersection of these domains, CAHME and The Joint Commission have established a distinctive, one-year fellowship program designed to cultivate the next generation of healthcare sustainability leaders.

This prestigious fellowship is awarded to a graduating student from a CAHME-accredited or certified program who has demonstrated a strong commitment to sustainability, healthcare quality and safety, and continuous process improvement.

This includes direct observation and participation in activities that support organizational quality and safety, as well as comprehensive training in The Joint Commission's evaluation methodologies and site visit protocols. Under the mentorship of the Global Director of Healthcare Sustainability, the Fellow will contribute to strategic project work that addresses sustainability within healthcare systems.
